Description

William Kelly (1821 - 1906) was one of the foremost expositors and Greek scholars of his day. He firmly believed in the priesthood of all believers and diligently applied himself to encourage all believers to enter into their privileges. He was firmly set against any scheme that attempted to rob the Christian of his God-given access into God's presence.

This booklet was written at a time when unbiblical rituals were being promoted in the established protestant church. These practices are now common place thus the need for the re-issue of this work is still present..
